Short answers

To form the short answer we repeat the subject pronoun and the verb, after Yes or No.

A Is she tired?
B Yes, she is. / No, she isn't.

A Are they students at the university?
B Yes, they are. / No they're not.

There is / There are

When we want to say something exists, begin the sentence with there + be + noun phrase.

There is a blackbird in the garden.
There aren't any forks in the kitchen drawer.
Is there a printer in the office?
There are many trees in the park.
Are there any tickets left?

Note!

Why do we use there is / there are?
English sentences do not usually begin with an indefinite noun phrase. E.g. A vase is on the table. Instead, we prefer to begin the sentence with there + be and put the indefinite subject after be.

Remember the sentence structure with question words:

Question word	+	verb	+	subject
Where		is		the TV remote?
How		are		your grandparents?

1 Choose the correct form of the verb to be to complete the sentences.

1 Francis _____ my friend.
2 Sam and Mark _____ brothers, they are cousins.
3 A _____ they French?
B No, they _____ . They _____ Spanish.
4 A _____ Joanne very hungry?
B No, I don't think she is.
5 My son _____ eight and my daughter _____ ten. They _____ at junior school now.
6 I _____ not very confident at playing sport.
7 Where _____ the children?
8 Paul _____ not very tall.

2 Reorder the words to make sentences using the verb to be.

1 we / to / going / aren't / today / the beach / ?
Aren't we going to the beach today?
2 playing / they / in the play / the main roles / are 3 well / not / feeling / is / today / he / very 4 a bus / you / taking / to the airport / are / ?
5 cold / she / wearing / isn't / just / a T-shirt / ?
6 not / raining / is / very much / it / anymore
7 you / better / the operation / looking / are / after 8 cinema / they / to / tonight / the / are / going / ?

3 Change these affirmative sentences into the negative and interrogative forms.

4 _____ a / an; Plurals; Demonstratives

The indefinite articles a and an come before:

- a singular countable noun
  a man, an idea
- modifiers + a singular countable noun
  a happy girl, a very famous person, an interesting book

When to use a; when to use an:

- We use a before a consonant sound (even if the first letter is a vowel).
  a dog, a girl, a horse, a unit, a European, a doctor, a nice picture
- We use an before a vowel sound (even if the first letter is a consonant).
  an address, an hour, an assistant, an actor, an ugly boy, an honest person

A / an has no plural form. Instead, we use either no word or some.

Plurals

We use the plural to indicate more than one person or thing. Pay attention to the following spelling rules:

- The regular plural form of a noun adds -s or -es.
  book → books school → schools cup → cups uncle → uncles week → weeks
- Most nouns add -s, but if the noun already ends in -s or -sh, -o, -z, -ch or -x we add -es.
  kiss → kisses wish → wishes tomato → tomatoes watch → watches box → boxes
- A small number of nouns have a special form. If the noun ends in a consonant and -y, we must take away the -y and add -ies.
  baby → babies party → parties
- Many words that end in -f or -fe change to -ves in the plural.
  leaf → leaves wife → wives

This, these, that and those are called demonstratives.
This and these are used to indicate things that are close. This is for singular words and these is for plural words.
This is my book. These are my books.

That and those are used to talk about things that are far away. That is for singular words and those is for plural words.
That is my dog over there. Those are my friends at the end of the street.

Note!

This, these, that and those are words which 'point' to things, people etc. near to or far from the speaker. This, these, that and those are also determiners (followed by a noun or by one/ones):

This pen is hers.
These blue hats are nicer than those ones.
Those books are interesting.
That car is faster than this one.

1 Write a or an in front of the following words.

1 _____ angry man.
2 _____ open window.

9 Put the knifes and forks on the table, please.
10 My mother is teacher.

UNIT

3 the

We use the when we are talking about something specific or something we have mentioned before. We place the before a noun phrase to show that it has definite meaning. This means that the speaker and the hearer share knowledge about exactly what the speaker is talking about.

Brian wants the action, adventure DVD.
I want the jumper you showed me before.

The goes before a noun, and also before any adjectives or other words which describe the noun.

the + noun	the + adjective + noun	the + number + noun
the tigers	the scary tigers	the four tigers

When we are talking in general terms we do not use the.
Rabbits are faster than turtles. [Which rabbits? Rabbits in general.]
Italians love to eat well. [Which Italians? Italians in general.]

We use the:

- before things that are unique
  The moon, the past…
- when we are talking in specific terms
  The man I saw yesterday was Tom's father. [Which man? The man I saw yesterday.]
  Where are the children? [Which children? The ones I'm looking for.]
- before some words which imply that they are the only one: superlatives, ordinals, (the) same, only.
  They are all good basketball players, but Mark is the best.
  What time is the last flight to Paris?
  I'm the same height as Andrew.
  These are the only trainers I have.

Always use the:

- after to play + name of an instrument. She plays the piano.
- before family names. The Smiths
- before the names of rivers and seas. the Rhine, the Atlantic.
- with some countries. the USA, the Netherlands, the UK.
- when referring to well-known or well-defined groups of people.
  the police, the sick, the famous

Never use the:

- after to play + name of a game / before the name of a sport or game.
  He's playing football at the moment.
- in front of titles + proper noun. Captain Hook
- before the names of lakes and single mountains. Lake Michigan, Kilimanjaro.
- before most countries that are singular. Italy.
- to refer to meals. What's for dinner?

Note!

The contrasts with the 'indefinite article' a or an.
The always has the same form before singular and plural nouns, or before countable and uncountable nouns. Contrast the and a:

	Countable: Singular	Plural	Uncountable
Definite	the clown	the clowns	the money
Indefinite	a clown	clowns	money

1 Insert the where necessary to complete the sentences.

6 Correct the following passage. Where necessary, delete the.

I like the tennis. I'm also very good at the swimming, but I don't like the swimming pools very much because there are always too many people there. But the swimming pool near our house is very nice. I often go there on the Saturday mornings. I meet my friends and we have the lunch at the cafeteria after we swim. I usually have a sandwich. There is also a big glass window in the cafeteria, and you can watch the swimmers while you eat.

one / ones

One and ones are used:

- when we want to emphasise the fact that we mean one in number She's got one car, not two.
- with the words another and other(s)
  Would you like another one?
- with the words morning, evening, night etc. when you mean on a certain
  I woke up one morning and discovered my hair was starting to turn grey.
- to avoid repeating the countable noun
  She's got lots of books. Why don't you ask her if you can borrow one.

have (got)

have + got indicates possession. The meaning does not change if you do not use got.
I've got a camera. = I have a camera.
He's got a sister. = He has a sister.

When the negative and interrogative forms are formed with do / does + have, we omit got.
I haven't got a car. = I don't have a car.

When we use short answers, we never use got.
A Has she got children?
B Yes, she has. / No, she hasn't.

Expressions with to have

There are many expressions that use to have as the main verb. They use do/does/did etc. because in these cases, to have does not indicate possession.
Does she have her breakfast every morning at 7.00 a.m?

To have is also used in the continuous tenses.
Listen to the noise! I think they are having a party.

We use to have with nouns referring to:

- washing — to have a bath, a shower, a wash…
- disagreeing — to have a fight, an argument…
- eating — to have breakfast, lunch, dinner, a snack, a picnic, a meal…
- relaxation and recreation — to have a party, a holiday, a rest, fun…
- talking — to have a conversation, a talk, a discussion…

- a consonant + -y drop the *-y and add *-ies.
  I study → He/She studies
- a vowel + -y add *-s.
  I buy → He/She buys

In questions, use do or does before the subject:

Do + Subject + Verb	Does + Subject + Verb
What do you mean?	Does Colin play snooker?

In negative sentences use do or does followed by not or -n't:
Cats don't like water.
That lock doesn't open.

Note!

When the question word (who, what, how…) is the subject of the sentence, we do not use do / does except in the negative-interrogative form.
Who likes dancing?
How many people want to go on the rollercoaster?

Adverbs of frequency

We use adverbs of frequency to say how often we do things.

0% 100%

never hardly ever seldom rarely not often occasionally sometimes often generally usually always

We usually put the adverb before the main verb:
She rarely goes swimming on a Saturday morning.
I don't always eat cereal in the morning.

With be, we put the adverb after the verb:
I'm always on time.

Adjectives and nouns of nationality; Time / Dates

Adjectives and nouns of nationality can be divided into four groups:

- adjectives and nouns ending in -an and -i (+ Greek) add -s when they indicate the population
  Austria (nation) → Austrian (adjective) - an Austrian (noun) - the Austrians (population)
- adjectives and nouns ending in -ese (+ Swiss) have the same form as adjective, noun and population
  Japan (nation) → Japanese (adjective) - a Japanese (noun) - the Japanese (population)
- adjectives ending in -ch or -sh have the same form as the population, but to indicate a single person, we must add -man / -woman.
  France (nation) → French (adjective) - a Frenchman/woman (noun) - the French (population)
- adjectives and nouns which have different forms.
  Poland (nation) - Polish (adjective) - a Pole (noun) - the Poles (population)

Note!

The adjective without the usually indicates the language.

UNIT

9 Direct and indirect objects; Word order

The position of direct and indirect objects (pronouns and nouns) in sentences.

With some verbs (lend, borrow, send, bring, give…) the sentence construction can differ, depending on whether the verb is followed by a direct or an indirect object:

- subject + verb + indirect object + direct object
  She sends her an email.
- subject + verb + direct object + to / for / from + indirect object
  They give money to him.

The second construction is less common and is used:

- when the indirect object is made up of several words
  Tom is sending forty invitations to his friends for his birthday party.
- when the object is a pronoun.
  Why don't you lend it to me?

In some cases (verbs such as explain, introduce, deliver, describe…) only the second construction is possible.
Can you introduce your cousin to me?

The normal order of a question is:
question word + auxiliary + subject + verb + object etc.

Where	are	you	taking	them?
	Do	they	like	tennis?

Word order
The normal order of a sentence is:
subject + adverb of frequency + verb + object + manner + place + time + frequency

She	always	takes	her children		to church	on Sundays.
We	never	do	our homework		in the library.
They		walk		slowly.

Note!
Alternatively, the time can go at the beginning of the sentence.
Next week, I'm going to Disneyland.

1 13 Replace the underlined word(s) with a pronoun and use the alternative construction. Then listen and check.

1 I never send him emails.
I never send them to him.

2 I always give my boss my projects on time.
_____

3 Laura and Sylvia often take the dog out for a walk.
_____

4 Give Lucy the headphones, please.

5 I often buy my grandmother flowers.

6 He rarely shows his friends his photos.

2 Write sentences and questions using the words given.

1 why / you / not phone / the police / for me?
Why don't you phone the police for me?

2 why / you / not get / some / strawberries / for your recipe?

3 they / often / not take / it / to / school

4 the farmer / always / give / me / free eggs

5 why / we / not send / them / chocolates / for their anniversary?

6 we / not want / take / them / to / England

3 Rewrite the sentences to change the direct object sentences to indirect object sentences, as in the example.

1 I often buy flowers for her.
I often buy her flowers.

2 Why don't you give some money to him?

3 Could you pass the plates to us, please?

4 I bought these jeans for you.

5 They want to buy a drink for us.

6 He rarely lends money to his friends.

7 We always bring souvenirs for them.

8 You never do favours for me.

4 Rewrite the sentences by replacing the indirect object (underlined) with a pronoun (him, her, them etc.) and putting it in front of the direct object.

1 I take my teacher the class register every morning.
I take him/her the class register every morning.

2 Give the key to Megan.

3 Can you give the money to the taxi driver, please?

4 When I go on holiday, I always bring something home for my friends.

5 She gives the students homework every day.

6 The technician checks the computers once a month.

5 Rewrite the sentences, replacing the underlined words with a subject pronoun, an indirect object and a direct object.

1 The teacher explained the lesson to the students.
She/He explained it to them.

2 John is out with Ellie for a meal.

3 Jennifer and I give gifts to our mother on her birthday.

4 This DVD is for Tom.

5 Uncle Alex and aunty Cathy often come to see me and my brother.

6 This dog usually chases cats.

The Present continuous is formed as follows:
subject + to be + verb in base form + -ing
I am studying.
He isn't coming.

The question form of the Present continuous is formed as follows:
question word + to be + subject + verb in base form + -ing
What are they doing?

Observe the following spelling rules:

- verbs ending in -e, drop the -e and add -ing to take → taking (Exceptions: to dye → dyeing; to queue → queueing.)
- verbs ending in -y, add -ing to stay → staying
- short verbs ending in one vowel and one consonant, double the final consonant
  to drop → dropping (Exceptions: verbs ending in -x and -w do not double the final consonant: to draw → drawing.)
- longer verbs ending in one vowel and one consonant, with the stress on the last syllable, double the final consonant to begin → beginning
- verbs ending in one vowel followed by -l, double the -l and add -ing.
  to travel → travelling (Exceptions: to dial → dialling; to fuel → fuelling.)
- verbs ending in -ie, change -ie to -y and add -ing to lie → lying
- verbs ending in -c, add -k and -ing
  to panic → panicking

The Present continuous is used:

- to express an activity that is happening now
  They're playing cards in the living room.
- to express an activity happening around now, but maybe not at the exact moment of speaking
  I'm going to English lessons this year.
- to express future plans already arranged, especially when you say when and who with.
  I'm having dinner with Tony tonight.

Note!

There are several verbs which aren't normally used in the continuous tenses. They are verbs of:

- thinking
  to know, to realise, to believe, to forget, to want, to wish, to imagine…
- being to be, to exist…
- appearance
  to appear, to seem, to look like…
- sense
  to hear, to taste, to smell, to see… (Exception: to feel)
- liking and disliking
  to love, to like, to hate, to admire…

Note!

These verbs are also not usually used in the continuous form: to matter, to involve, to surprise, to mean, to interest, to deserve, to satisfy, to concern...

Note!

When to have does not indicate possession, it can be used in the continuous tense.
She's having dinner at the moment.

UNIT

11 must, have to, can, could, be able to, should, need, may, might

Must is used:
- to give strong advice and orders to ourselves and to others
  I really must go to bed earlier.
  You mustn't eat too much fast food.
- for obligations
  You must tell the truth!
- in affirmative sentences to say that something is certain or highly possible
  The phone is ringing, it must be my mum.

must + have + past participle is used to draw conclusions in relation to events/situations in the past.
I broke my leg last winter while skiing. That must have been so painful!

have to + infinitive is used to talk about obligations imposed by external circumstances.
How often do you have to go away on business?

The meaning is quite similar to must in the affirmative Present simple. In the negative, however, they have very different meanings.
You must tell David! = You have to tell David! (In both cases, the meaning is: It is imperative to tell David.)
You mustn't tell David! (It is imperative that you do not tell David. I forbid you to tell David.)
You don't have to tell David! (It's not necessary to tell David, but you may if you like.)

Can is used:
- to talk about ability
  She can play the piano very well.
- to talk about possibility and probability
  I don't think that bike can be repaired.
- to ask for or give permission
  Can I have something to drink, please?
- as a negative for must in sentences such as:
  You walked home in the rain? It can't have been very nice.

To form the past we use: can't + have + past participle
He can't have walked. It's too far.

Could is used:
- for particular occasions in the past, with verbs like: to see, to hear, to smell, to taste, to feel, to understand, to remember
  I could smell something burning.
- to express formal invitations or suggestions
  Could you lend me some money, please?
  We could go together.
- to make offers or requests
  Could you close the window, please?
- in conditional sentences (see Unit 34)
  If you spoke English fluently, you could get a better job. (= If you spoke English fluently, you would be able to get a better job.)
- to express a permanent ability or capacity. Otherwise we use: was / were able to, managed to or succeed in.
  They could speak Italian (permanent ability) so they were able to ask for directions (ability/possibility at that moment).

be able to + infinitive often has the same meaning as can when the infinitive is required.
Some people are able to / can speak five languages.

Be able to is used in cases (future, present perfect) where can is not grammatically possible.
Soon the baby will be able to walk. (Not: … will can walk.)

Should is used:
- to talk about obligation, duty or similar, but it is less strong than must
  People shouldn't eat too much fatty foods.
- in conditional sentences
  If I had a day off, I should clean the house.

We use should have / shouldn't have + past participle to indicate that you or someone else made a mistake or a bad decision.
I should have written her a birthday card but I forgot
I shouldn't have eaten so much food.
You should have studied more for the exam.
She shouldn't have left her bag in the classroom.

Need is used:
- to refer to immediate necessity
  Do you need anything else?
- as a modal verb, to ask for or to give permission
  You needn't pay this bill.
  Do I need to arrive early?

Note!

Need has two negative forms in the past:
don't / doesn't / didn't need + infinitive, meaning: It was not necessary and it wasn't done.
You didn't need to bring that subject up.

needn't + have + past participle to mean:
It was not necessary but it was done.
We needn't have called to say hello. (But we did!)

May is used:
- formally to ask for, to give or to refuse permission
  May I come in, please?
- to talk about a possibility in the present or future
  We may go to Amsterdam next year. (There is a 50% chance.)
- for past events: may + have + past participle
  They may have called while we were at the cinema.

Might is used:
- to ask for permission, to make suggestions and to express possibilities
  We might go to India next year. (There is a 35% chance.)
- in second conditional sentences
  If I won the lottery, I might donate some money to charity.
- to express future in the past
  He said he might stop.

Note!

The past might + have + past participle is used:
- to express possibility
  I might have been sleeping.
- to say that something was possible but didn't happen
  He was lucky, he might have fallen down.
- to make suggestions or express disappointment, reproach
  You might have informed me before I spoke.

Countable and uncountable nouns; Collective nouns; Compound nouns

Countable nouns have a singular and plural form. This is because we can count these things.
a dog → two dogs
an umbrella → five umbrellas
a student → some students

Uncountable nouns have only a singular form. We do not usually count these things and we cannot use a or an with them.
silver, water, milk, happiness, honesty, swimming, listening, food
This is delicious cheese.
Have you got time?

Many nouns can be used as countable or as uncountable nouns. Usually there is a difference in meaning.
The window is made of glass. (Uncountable)
I'll have two glasses of water, please. (Countable)

Have you got any orange juice? (Uncountable)
Can I have two glasses of orange juice? (Countable)

Other examples include: paper, wood, potato...

Some uncountable nouns are used only in the plural form. They have no singular form with the same meaning and cannot be used with numbers.
I love clothes. (Not: A clothe or three clothes.)
binoculars, groceries, arms, goods, thanks, police, pyjamas, scissors, trousers...
Some nouns have the same form for the singular and the plural.
sheep, deer, salmon, trout, pork...

Some nouns are singular even if they end in -s and therefore take a singular verb.
Darts is a fun game.
Other examples include news, maths, physics, billiards, fish and chips...

Note!

The following nouns are uncountable in English but they may be countable in your language!
accommodation, bread, advice, information, furniture, luggage, money, progress, spaghetti, work, homework, traffic, rain, news, noise, paper, fruit, hair...

Some uncountable nouns can be made countable by putting them into containers, servings or parts.
a piece of news, a game of billiards, a cup of coffee, a slice of bread, a sheet of paper, a piece of advice, three bottles of water, two packets of crisps...

Collective nouns
In English, singular nouns like family, team, government, which refer to groups of people, can be used either with singular or with plural pronouns. Singular forms are more common when the group is seen as an impersonal unit. Plural forms are more common when the group is considered as a collection of people considered as individuals.
The average French family has four members.
My family have bought a new flat. They decided the other one was too small.

Note!

Some collective nouns can only be plural (police, people etc.)

Compound nouns
Compound nouns are nouns made up of two or more elements.
toothache, mother-in-law, travel agent, a five-litre bottle, chicken soup...

UNIT

19 other(s), another, else; every, each; all, whole; both, either, neither

Other (pronoun and adjective), others (pronoun)
Where are the other photos?
He never thinks of others.

Another (pronoun and adjective) can mean an additional / an extra one, and is used with singular countable nouns.
Please, do have another!
Can I have another glass of orange juice, please?

Indefinite pronoun + else. We use else to mean more or different after: somebody, something…; anybody, anything…; everybody, everything…; nobody, nothing…; who, what, why, when, how; whatever, whenever…; little; much.
I'm sorry. I mistook you for someone else. (a different / another person)
What else did you buy? (What did you buy in addition?)

Every (adjective) is used with singular nouns to talk about three or more people or things. In many cases, both every and each (see below) can be used without much difference of meaning.
Every is commonly used when we are thinking of people or things together, in a group and often suggests without exception.
The teacher paid attention to every student.

Each (adjective and pronoun) is normally used with singular nouns to talk about two or more people or things. We prefer to use each when we are thinking of things or people separately, one at a time.
She had a shopping bag in each hand.
Each person, in turn, went to talk to the teacher.

All (adjective and pronoun) and every (see above) can both be used to talk about people or things in general, or about members of a group.
- All = entire, whole. She was here all day.
- All + plural nouns (= more than two). All the lights were out.
- All + of All (of) the food was in the basket.

Whole can be used with singular or plural nouns to mean complete, entire.
Jane spent the whole week in bed.
Whole fields of corn were destroyed.

Note!

We never use whole with uncountable nouns.
He gave me all the information.

Both (of) (adjective and pronoun) + plural
She has eaten both pieces of cake.
Both… and…
She's both intelligent and funny.

Either (adjective) + singular noun to mean one or the other.
Come Monday or Tuesday. Either day is fine with me.
Either… or…
You can either have coffee or tea.
Either you tell her or I will.

Neither (adjective) + singular noun to mean not one and not the other.
Monday or Tuesday? Sorry, I'm afraid neither day is possible.
Neither… nor is used to join two negative ideas.
Neither Ivan nor Alex was at home.
Neither… of + plural.
Neither of us saw the movie.

Reflexive pronouns; each other, one another; get + adjectives

SUBJECT PRONOUNS	REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS
I	myself
you	yourself
he	himself
she	herself
it	itself
we	ourselves
you	yourselves
they	themselves

Note that the forms for the 2nd person singular and plural are different.

Reflexive pronouns are used when the direct or indirect object of the verb is the same as the subject.

The boss gave himself a big pay increase.
I made myself a sandwich.
It's annoying. Simon always talks about himself.

Reflexive pronouns are used:

- to emphasise that someone did something personally
  You cooked the whole dinner yourself ? That's impressive!
- with by to mean alone
  I learned to drive by myself. (No one taught me or helped me.)

Verbs that describe actions that people usually do to themselves do not take reflexive pronouns.
I wash and dress before having breakfast. [We usually wash and dress our own person.]

Other verbs that do not take reflexive pronouns are: to fall in love with, to feel, to meet, to get up, to hurry, to relax.

Each other usually expresses a reciprocal relationship between two things or people.
My mother and father love each other.

One another usually expresses a relationship between two or more things or people.
When the teacher gave the test results, the students looked at one another in surprise.

Get + adjective means become.

The form of the Past simple is the same for all persons.

The affirmative of regular verbs ends in -ed.
work → worked
The forms of the irregular verbs must be learned by heart.

The negative of the Past simple is formed with didn't (= did not) + the infinitive of the verb without to.

The question form is formed with did + the infinitive of the verb without to.

The negative-interrogative form is formed with didn't (= did not) + the infinitive of the verb without to.

Spelling exceptions of regular verbs in the Past simple:

- verbs ending in -e add -d
  dance → danced
- one-syllable verbs (except verbs ending in -x and -w) and two-syllable verbs that have the stress on the last syllable, and end in one vowel followed by one consonant, double the consonant to drop → dropped to prefer → preferred
- verbs ending in a vowel + -l double the -l
  to travel → travelled
- verbs ending in a consonant + -y change the -y to -i + -ed
  to study → studied
- verbs ending in -c add -k + -ed
  to panic → panicked

The Past simple is used:

- to express a finished action in the past
  We went to the cinema yesterday.
- to express actions which follow each other in a story
  I went to the greengrocer's and bought some oranges.
  I took out my wallet and paid.
- for habitual actions in the past
  When I was young, I played tennis every Saturday.

To form short answers in the Past simple we use:
Yes, + subject + did. / No, + subject + didn't.
Did you talk to Nancy? Yes, we did. / No, we didn't.

When we use question words, the word order is:

question word	+	did	+	subject	+	infinitive
How much		did		it		cost?
Where		did		you		go on holiday?

Note!

When the question word is also the subject of the sentence, we do not use did.
Who finished the cake?

They were coming.	They were not coming. / They weren't coming.	Were they coming?	Weren't they coming?

The Past continuous is formed with was / were + verb in base form + -ing.

The Past continuous is used:

- to express a past activity happening over a period of time (the activity had started but not finished at the time another activity or event occurred)
  I was sleeping when you phoned. (I fell asleep before you phoned.)
- to describe two or more long actions which were happening at the same time in the past
  Tony was reading a book and Andrew was listening to music.

Note!
The Past continuous and the Past simple are often used together. The Past simple interrupts the action of the Past continuous.

Have they walked?	Yes, they have. No, they haven't.	Haven't they walked?

The Present perfect simple connects past actions and situations with the present. It is mainly used to talk about:

- past events with a present result
  I've broken my leg. (= My leg is broken now.)
- recent actions/events when the time is not specified (e.g. news)
  There has been an explosion at the train station.
- actions in the recent past (ever, before, never, yet, already)
  I've already spoken to my boss about my holiday.
- the indefinite past (we're interested in what happened, not when it happened)
  A Have you ever seen 'Romeo and Juliet?'
  B Yes, I've seen it.

  But, if the time of action is mentioned, we must use the Past simple.
  A Have you seen 'Romeo and Juliet?'
  B Yes, I saw it on TV last week.
- general experience
  I've travelled all over the world.
- actions starting in the past and continuing to the present (usually with for and since)
  We've lived in this flat for three years.
- with expressions like it's the first / second / third time
  It's the second time I've written to them.

- it is also used with expressions of unfinished time (all my life, in the last few days/months/years, today etc.).
  I've written six letters this morning (it's 11:30 a.m.).

Note!

to go has two past participles:
He has been to the store. (He went and he came back.)
He has gone to the store. (He went and he hasn't come back yet.)

Notice the word order with adverbs of frequency. Ever and never come before the past participle.

The Present perfect continuous is formed with has / have + been + -ing form of the main verb.
It is used:

- to express a continuous activity that began in the past and will probably continue into the future
  He has been working for our firm for many years.
- to express an action that began in the past and has just recently stopped
  He has been talking on the phone. (Now he's writing a letter.)

For and since for + period of time (three days, an hour, more than two years, ages, many weeks…).

since + specific moment in time (Christmas, last Thursday, March, I was young, 1978…).

Present perfect simple vs present perfect continuous

Both the Present perfect tenses can be used to talk about recent actions and situations that continue into the present. However, there are important differences:

- The Present perfect continuous focuses on the action/situation itself, drawing attention to its continuous/extended nature; the Present perfect simple emphasises the finishing of an action/situation and its result.
  I've read your book. (Focus = the fact that I have finished reading the book.)
  I've been reading your book. (Focus = the activity of reading your book, which I haven't finished yet.)
- The Present perfect continuous is used to say how long; the Present perfect simple is used to say how much, how often, how many.
  They've been sleeping for ten hours. / I've studied two chapters.

- The Present perfect continuous is used for temporary situations; the Present perfect simple is used for permanent situations.
  She's been staying with relatives for a month. / I've lived in Milan all my life.
  (Note! We do not use for or since with all.)

Sometimes there is very little difference between the two forms. When both are possible, it is preferable to use the Present perfect continuous.

There are certain verbs that can never be used in any continuous tense. These are verbs relating to:

- sense (to smell, to taste, to hear, to see…)
- liking or disliking (to hate, to love, to like…)
- thinking (to believe, to forget, to imagine, to know)
- possession (to have, to belong, to own, to possess…)
- being (to be, to exist…)

UNIT

29 Present perfect simple or Past simple

The Present perfect simple looks back from the present to the past.
The Past simple focuses on actions in the past.

We use the Present perfect to ask or say how long something has been happening up to the moment of speaking; use the Past simple to ask or say when something happened.
They've known each other for two years.
They saw each other at the cinema yesterday.

The Present perfect always tells us something about the present; the Past simple tells us only about the past but we don't know if the situation is still true at the moment of speaking.
I've broken my arm. (My arm is broken at the moment of speaking.)
I broke my arm.

Use the Present perfect with indefinite times (lately, recently, never, ever…) or with this morning, this year, today etc. when these times are not finished.
I've never been to London.
Have you seen Tony this morning? [It's still morning.]

Use the Past simple with finished times (yesterday, last year, two months ago…).
I went to the doctor's yesterday.

Use the Present perfect to give new information or to announce a recent happening but then use the Past simple to continue the story.
A I've cut my finger!
B How did you do it?

Note!

It's three days since they called. [affirmative, Past simple] = They haven't called for three days. [negative, Present perfect]
It's a week since we spoke. [affirmative, Past simple] = We haven't spoken for a week. [negative, Present perfect]

1 Complete the sentences with for, since or *ago.

They had eaten.	They hadn't eaten.	Had they eaten?	Hadn't they eaten?

The Past perfect is formed with had + past participle of the verb. It is the same for all persons.

We use the Past perfect:

- to express an action in the past, which happened before another action in the past. We use the Past perfect for the earlier event and the Past simple for the more recent event.
  When I arrived, Fred had already left.

Note!

Look at the difference between these two sentences:
When I arrived, Fred left. (First I arrived and then Fred left.)
When I arrived, Fred had left. (Fred left before I arrived.)

- to talk about past events with the expressions It was the first/second... time...
  It was the second time she had been late for work.
- with the expressions already, yet, just, and even
  I arrived at the bank at 5.30 p.m. but it had already closed.

1 Complete the sentences with the Past perfect. Then, write the sentences in the negative, interrogative and negative interrogative form.

There are several ways of expressing the future in English. We can use:

- the Future simple, to make predictions, general statements, offers, and to describe decisions made at the moment of speaking.
- going to, to describe plans, intentions, decisions already made about the future, and for predictions based on evidence.
- the Present continuous, to express a planned future (see Unit 10).

The Future simple is formed with will + the infinitive of the verb without to.
I'll text you later.

In short answers with the Future simple we repeat the personal pronoun and the auxiliary will / won't:
A Will he be here by tomorrow?
B Yes, he will. / No, he won't.

The Future simple is used:

- to express predictions about the future
  The party will be great.
- after verbs such as to think, to expect, to hope, to suppose, to doubt, to be certain…
  I doubt it will stop raining.
- to express a decision taken at the moment of speaking Listen, there's someone at the door. I'll get it!
- to express something in the future which is independent of the speaker's control
  It will be his birthday next week.
- in sentences that contain the if / when / unless + Present simple + Future structure.
  If you want, I'll come and pick you up at the station.

The future with going to is formed with the present tense of to be + going to + the infinitive of the verb without to.
He is going to call me tomorrow.

To form short answers with going to we use the structure:
Yes, + subject + am/are/is
No, + subject + 'm not/aren't/isn't

A Are you going to eat with us?
B Yes, I am. / No, I'm not.

Going to is used:
- to express a future action, intention or plan
  We are going to move to Spain.
- when, at the moment of speaking, we can see or feel that something is certain to happen in the near future
  Look at those black clouds. It's going to rain.

Note the difference:
I'm going to make pasta for lunch. = [Decision made in the morning, when I went food shopping.]

A group of friends call and unexpectedly decide to stay for lunch...
No problem! I'll make some pasta! = [Decision made at the moment of speaking.]

Relative clauses

	DEFINING CLAUSE		NON-DEFINING CLAUSE
	PEOPLE	THINGS/ANIMALS	PEOPLE	THINGS/ANIMALS
SUBJECT	who / that	which / that	who	which
OBJECT	who / whom / that	which / that	who / whom	which
WITH PREPOSITIONS	Prep. + whom	Prep. + which	Prep. + whom	Prep. + which
POSSESSIVE	whose	whose / of which	whose	whose / of which

A clause is a part of a sentence. We use relative clauses to join two sentences or to give more information about something.

Defining relative clauses provide essential information to tell us which person or thing (or what kind of person or thing) the speaker is referring to.

- Subject
  What's the name of the woman who/that just walked in?
  The dog which/that bit me belonged to Rita.
- Object
  The children who/that/whom you saw in the park are my cousins.
  The radio that/which I bought last week is fantastic.

Note!

We can omit who/that/which when they are object pronouns:
The radio (that/which) I bought last week is fantastic.

- With prepositions
  This is the house in which I was born. (Formal)
  This is the house (that) I was born in. (Informal)
- Possession
  Whose is used to indicate who something belongs to or relates to. It is more correctly used with people, but whose can also be used before nouns.
  Those are the people whose car was stolen.
  The car whose tyres were flat was towed away.

Non-defining relative clauses do not identify or classify; they simply tell us more about a person or thing that is already identified. This extra information is provided between commas.

- Subject
  My friend, who is from Spain, speaks good English.
  My nails, which usually are strong, broke yesterday.
- Object
  Brian, who everyone thought was clever, failed his exam. (Informal)
  Brian, whom everyone thought was clever, failed his exam. (Formal)
  My hat, which has flowers on it, is funny.

- With prepositions
  Harry, who I work with, is a great guy. (Informal)
  Harry, with whom I work, is a great guy. (Formal)
  This watch, which I paid a lot of money for, doesn't work very well. (Informal)
  This watch, for which I paid a lot of money, doesn't work very well. (Formal)

- Possession
  My uncle, whose son is a doctor, works in a bank.
  The car, the bumper of which/whose bumper had been dented, was taken to the garage.

34 Conditionals

The Present conditional is formed with would ('d) + infinitive of the verb without to. Would is used for all persons.

Affirmative
I would like to use the computer for an hour.
Negative
He wouldn't go home.
Interrogative
Would they go on their own?
Negative-interrogative
Wouldn't you enjoy going to the cinema with Emma?

It is used:

- with the verb to like to express a desire
  She would like to have a dog.
- to ask or offer in a polite way
  Would you like some coffee?
  Would you come with me, please?
- in second conditional sentences
  I would call if I had time.
  If I were you, I would study harder.
- to express the past tense of will or going to
  She said she would be here.
  He said he would buy some bread. (He said that but didn't buy any bread.)

The Present conditional continuous is formed with would + be + verb in base form + -ing.
She told me they would be working in the garden.

It is used to talk about an imaginary situation that could be happening at this moment. It is used for actions that might take place.

Zero conditional: if + Present simple + Present simple
If we heat ice, it melts.
If I'm late for school, my teacher gets angry.
I feel ill if I eat too much junk food.

The Zero conditional is used to talk about general truths. We use it to express what always happens if or when a certain action takes place.
If it rains, you get wet.
If people don't eat, they get hungry.
The teacher fails students if they miss an exam.

First conditional: if + Present simple + Future simple
If she finishes early, she'll join us.

The First conditional is used when we think the action is possible.
If she marries him, she will be happy.

Second conditional: if + Past simple + Present conditional
If you studied, you would pass your test.

The Second conditional is used when we talk about a situation that is imaginary or unlikely.
If I had the money, I would go on holiday. (I don't think I'll have the money.)
If I had the courage, I would try bungee jumping. (I don't think I will have the courage.)

Question tags

Question tags are short questions that often come at the end of a statement. They can be used to check whether something is true or to invite agreement.

We form question tags with the auxiliary or modal verb + subject pronoun. The pronoun always refers to the subject of the sentence. The verb in a question tag is always an auxiliary, a modal or a form of to be and agrees with the verb in the sentence.
You can swim, can't you?
She's your teacher, isn't she?

If the main sentence has no auxiliary or if the main verb is in the Present simple or Past simple of to have, the question tag is do.
You like swimming, don't you?
Ben gave her a necklace, didn't he?
He has lunch at noon, doesn't he?
N.B He has a nice family, doesn't / hasn't he? (have in possessive sense)

Question tags are used after affirmative and negative sentences only. To check information or ask for agreement, we usually put negative tags after affirmative sentences and affirmative tags after negative sentences.
Positive statement = negative tag It's cold, isn't it?
Negative statement = positive tag It's not warm, is it?

With words of negative sense (never, hardly, nobody etc.) we use an affirmative question tag.
He could hardly speak, could he?

When we want to express surprise, anger, interest etc., we can use an affirmative question tag in an affirmative sentence.
You think you're funny, do you?

can / can't / could you? and will / would you? are used to make an imperative sentence more polite.
Help me set the table, could you?
Call me tonight, will you?

Note!

After a negative imperative we must use will you?
Don't cross the road, will you?

After let's we use shall we?
Let's go dancing, shall we?

We use they in question tags after someone / somebody, everyone / everybody and no one / nobody.
No one came, did they?

We use it after nothing.
Nothing happened, did it?

There is used as a subject in question tags.
There wasn't any food left, was there?

Note!

When we reply to a question tag, the answer must refer to the sentence, not to the tag.

A You're late, aren't you?
B Yes, I am. (agreement) / No, I'm not. (disagreement)

A They didn't eat, did they?
B No, they didn't. (agreement) / Yes, they did. (disagreement)

Verbs of sensory perception

To hear, to see, to watch, to notice, to listen to, to look at, to imagine, to perceive, to observe can be followed by:

- object + infinitive (without to)
  I saw him open the door.

We use this form:

- to indicate that we perceive/perceived the entire action or event
  I watched him enter the building.
  I saw the car hit the old lady.
- to refer to actions or events that we habitually perceive/perceived
  I see him arrive every morning.
  I love to watch the sun rise.
- when we perceive a series of events
  I noticed him pick up the note, read it and put it in his pocket.

The verbs of sensory perception can also be followed by:

- object + -ing form

We use this form to emphasise the action/event, and the fact that we perceived as it was happening.
I watched them pulling the man out of the car. (but I do not know/say whether they finished/ succeeded in pulling him out. I simply say that I saw the action.)

- object + past participle
  This (passive) form is also used to emphasise the fact that we perceived an action/event as it was happening.
  I watched the man being pulled out the car.

When the verbs of perception are used in the passive (e.g. He was seen, They were observed…) they are followed by:

- the infinitive when the action was seen or heard entirely
  He was seen to leave the building. (We actually saw him as he walked away)
- the *-ing form when the action or event was perceived as it was taking place, or when we want to emphasise the action rather than the fact that it was completed
  He was seen putting the money into his pocket.
  He was noticed talking to some of the children.

Gerund (-ing form) / Infinitive

Gerund (-ing form)
When we put a verb after a preposition, we normally use an -ing form, not an infinitive.
Always brush your teeth after eating.
They're talking about moving to Spain.
I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Some examples of to as a preposition are: to look forward to, to object to, to be used to, to prefer to, to get around to, in addition to...

Common verbs that are normally followed by the -ing form are:
to admit, to appreciate, to avoid, to burst out, to consider, to contemplate, to delay, to deny, to detest, to dislike, to endure, to enjoy, to escape, to excuse, to face, to fancy, to feel like, to finish, to forgive, to give up, (can't) help, to imagine, to involve, to keep (on), to leave off, to mention, to mind, to miss, to postpone, to practise, to put off, to resent, to resist, to risk, (can't) stand / bear, to suggest, to understand...

When the action of the -ing clause is done by another we can use:
- possessive adjective / -'s + -ing form (formal)

I can't bear his / John's joking.

- object / noun + -ing form (informal)

I can't bear him / John joking.

Verb + Infinitive
Common verbs normally followed by the infinitive include:
to afford, to agree, to appear, to ask, to attempt, to decide, to expect, to help, to hope, to manage, to mean, to offer, to prepare, to promise, to refuse, to seem, to threaten, to want, to wish...
I promise to call you.

Some verbs can take both the infinitive and -ing form:
to begin, to start, to continue, to attempt, to bother, to try, to fear… can be followed by either form with no significant difference in meaning.
I have started studying. = I have started to study.

Note!

If they are in a continuous tense, they are followed by the infinitive.
I am beginning to worry.

to begin, to start and to continue are followed by the infinitive of to understand, to know and to realise.
I started to understand what he was saying.
I began to realise that I didn't love him any more.

to be sorry for / to regret
- + -ing form for an action in the past
  I'm sorry for breaking that vase.
- + infinitive for an action that still has to take place
  I regret to inform you that you can't go on holiday.

to hate, to like, to dislike, to love, to prefer
- + -ing form for habitual habits
  I always wear skirts. I hate wearing trousers.
- + infinitive: with the conditional
  We would love to see your wedding photos.

to mean
- + *-ing form = to involve / to imply
  Having a family doesn't mean leaving your job.
- + infinitive = to want / to intend
  I meant to call you but I've been very busy.

to remember / to forget
- + *-ing form for an action in the past
  I remember leaving my keys in the car.
- + infinitive for an action in the future
  I promise I'll never forget to lock the door.

to stop
- + *-ing form = to stop doing something
  She stopped eating meat last year.
- + infinitive = to stop something to do something else
  We stopped to buy some meat.

to need
- + -ing form is used when the subject of the need clause is the object of the -ing clause
  This house needs cleaning.
- + infinitive is used when the subject of the need clause is also the subject of the infinitive clause
  I need to borrow some money.

UNIT

39 Reported speech

There are two ways of reporting what people said, their thoughts or beliefs:

- direct speech
  He said, 'I hate you!', and left the room.
- reported (or indirect) speech
  He said that he hated me, and left the room.

When the verb introducing the reported speech is in:

- the Present simple, the Present perfect or the Future, the tense in the reported statement doesn't change.
  I like this cake. → Bob says he likes this cake. Bob has always said he likes this cake.
- the Past simple, Past perfect or conditional, the verb changes as follows:

DIRECT SPEECH	REPORTED SPEECH
Present simple: 'I play tennis' →	Past simple: She said she played tennis.
Present continuous: 'I am playing' →	Past continuous: He said he was playing.
Present perfect: 'We have been to France' →	Past perfect: They said they had been to France.
Past simple: 'Tom left on Friday' →	Past perfect: She said Tom had left on Friday
Future: 'I will call' →	Present conditional: He told me he would call.
Future continuous: 'I will be arriving late' →	Present continuous conditional: She said she would be arriving late.
Imperative: Don't play! →	Infinitive: He told her not to play.

Note!

When the reported statement is already in the Past continuous, Past perfect, Past perfect continuous, Present conditional or Perfect conditional, then the tense does not change.

- A change of place and time may mean it is necessary to change certain words, e.g: here → there, this → that, now → then, today → that day, yesterday → the day before, tomorrow → the following or the next day, next Tuesday → the following Tuesday, last Monday → the previous Monday, ago → before
  I felt ill last Friday. → He said he'd felt ill the previous Friday.
- A change of speaker may mean a change of pronoun.
  Tony I love reading.
  Mary Tony says that he loves reading. (Not: Tony says that I love reading.)
- With modal verbs: can, may, shall change to could, might, should
  Can I speak to the doctor? → She asked if he could speak to the doctor.
- Must does not change if it is used to indicate a logical deduction, prohibition or intention
  You must stop talking! → She said that I must stop talking.
  Must changes to had to if it expresses obligation
  You must leave immediately! → They said I had to leave immediately.

  Must can also change to would have to
  I must see him tomorrow. → He said that he would have to see him tomorrow.

Note!

The Past simple and Past perfect after to wish do not change.
I wish I were rich. → She told us she wished she were rich.

- Questions
  How old are you? → I asked how old she was.
  Have you finished? → She wondered if / whether he had finished.
- Reporting short answers
  A Do you like skiing?
  B Yes, I do.
  → I asked him if he liked skiing and he replied that he did.

  A Will you be leaving the office at 5 o'clock?
  B No.
  → I wanted to know if he would be leaving the office at 5 o'clock and he replied that he wouldn't.

Passives

The passive is formed with the appropriate form of the auxiliary to be + past participle of the main verb.
They speak English here. (Active)
English is spoken here. (Passive)
They built this house in 1980. (Active)
This house was built in 1980. (Passive)

The passive is used:

- when we want to talk about an action, but we are not interested in saying who did it
  The judge decided the punishment. (Active)
  The punishment was decided by the judge. (Passive)
- when we don't know or don't want to say who the agent is Someone has left the door unlocked. (Passive)
  The door has been left unlocked. (Passive)
- in formal writing.

In a passive clause, we usually use a phrase beginning with by if we want to mention the agent.
Your children caused all the trouble. (Active)
The trouble was caused by your children. (Passive)

Note!

When the active sentence contains two objects (direct and indirect), the indirect object usually becomes the new subject of the passive sentence.
Mary gave her friend (= indirect object) a present (= direct object).
Her friend (= subject) was given a present.

With modal verbs, the passive is formed as follows:
They couldn't hear me. = I couldn't be heard.

to need, to require, to want can be followed by -ing form with a passive function.
Your socks need mending.

In sentences with to think, to consider, to believe, to say, to report, to know, to find there are two possible passive forms.
They say he is a genius. (Active)
It is said that he is a genius. (Passive)

Dad Hi, Alex. I'm at the local greengrocer's but I forgot to bring mum's shopping list. Can you go to the kitchen and tell me what we need?
Alex Yes, sure. One minute. Right, what do you want to know?
Dad Have we got any tomatoes or any carrots?
Alex There aren't many tomatoes, only one, and I can't see any carrots. There isn't much broccoli, either. We've got some cheese, but I think we need a few cartons of apple juice. Oh, and some ham. There are also no strawberry yogurts left. Tom ate them all.
Dad OK. And what about food from the store cupboard, like pasta and rice?
Alex Well, we've got some pasta left, but just half a pack. But I think we've got some fresh pasta. There are a few packets of rice in the cupboard, too.
Dad Is there any milk?
Alex No, we've got none. We've also only got a little coffee left, so get some of that.
Dad Anything else?
Alex Yeah, there's no ice cream in the freezer. You know I love ice cream!
Dad OK, OK, I'll pick you up some. Chocolate, right?
Alex Of course! Thanks dad!
